Dear Barbara:

Many thanks for your and Marcus Rhoades troubles. May I bother you still with it? I admit that the chances for detection, even if translocations occur, are not great. However is there no a possibility of association like this association in normal trisomic groups for one arm and non homologous association in the other (of one II with one III?). Such association, I think, might lead to a gamete containing only the II-III exchange chromosomes. I realize that this is only one possibility and that this should be pointed out. But the very fact that the occurrence of translocations in extra-chromosome pairs (including triploids: Crepis) has been found sometimes and sometimes not, does not seem to allow me to expect too much one way or the other. That's why I thought a statement of the negative result still to be worthwhile putting on record.

As to the abnormal reduction: There was no known abnormality present in the autosomes of the triploid. Egg counts are useless, as most eggs are inviable anyway after fertilisation, on account of the unbalance of all not two-II and two-IV zygotes; and the whole aspect of reduction in 3N aneuploids is strange anyway (cf. Genetics of Dros. p. 160). I know that only a real study can clear up this, but I shall not be able to do it as I want to do different things.

Will you kindly reply? Or, if you are too crowded in with work, perhaps Rhoades will send a few lines.

Let us know, on which boat you'll decide

Best regards,

Curt.

Dr. J. Hammerling in Hartmann's Dept is my best friend there. He will be of general help. Not much English.

Dr. F. Gross also in Hartm. Dept. speaks more English, I believe, certainly very helpful too.

Fräulein Fournes in Hartm. Dept., the secretary. Very helpful. Might give lessons in German, which she has done successfully with other scientists. Speaks English.

Fran Belar in Hartm. Dept. Lives together with Fr. E. Stein. Will send a letter introducing you especially.

Fr. Thamm in Goldschmidt's Dept. Technical assistant. Speaks some English. Very helpful.

Fran Carrière the hostess and manager of the Harrack-Haus will take care of you anyway. Might do so perhaps especially if you give regards from me. Speaks English.
